Recycled Content Task Force

Use of recycled content in plastic packaging resin is an essential part of promoting a circular economy and reducing plastic waste and can result in many environmental and economic benefits. Post-consumer recycled (PCR) plastic is a substantial source of recycled material but increasing its use poses particular challenges. To strengthen demand and market certainty for PCR plastic, some states have enacted laws that require the incorporation of specific percentages of PCR content into packaging or products. These requirements do not by themselves address the supply problem – low rates of plastic recycling – and have state-specific nuances that can make national-level decision-making difficult. This session will discuss ways the plastic supply chain can come together to approach complying with PCR content mandates and industry initiatives to advance new technological solutions, such as advanced recycling for plastics. Attendees will also explore developing industry guidelines or standards around recycled content in plastic packaging for household and commercial products.

Andy Brewer, Associate Director of Sustainability & Recycling at the Plastics Industry Association (PLASTICS)

Policy Implications of the Evolving Market

Increasing the Availability of Refillable, Reusable, and Concentrated Products

One way that companies are aiming to improve their environmental footprint is through products that can be used multiple times before being disposed. In this working session, attendees will discuss the challenges that industry might face when making the shift to refillable, reusable, and concentrated products.

David Fischer, Counsel, Keller & Heckman

Devon Hill, Partner, Keller & Heckman

Mark Thompson, Partner, Keller & Heckman

8:45 am – 10:15 am | Salon E

Antimicrobial Products Division Meeting (AEG)

During this session, EPA BEAD will provide an update on the Division's latest activities, including priorities, test method development updates, and outreach efforts.

Anne Overstreet, Director, EPA Biological and Economic Analysis Division (BEAD)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5

8:45 am – 9:45 am | Salon GH

International Affairs Council Program

Legislative and regulatory activity in other countries typically influences U.S. policies. While we often look to Europe, companies should also be aware of what's happening in the north with one of our most important trading partners, Canada. Experts from the Canadian Consumer Specialty Products Association (CCSPA) will discuss activity in Canada that may impact the industry.

Simon Kinsman, Director of Policy, CCSPA

8:45 am – 10:15 am | Salon JK

Regulatory Affairs Council Program

Leading EPA's Pollution Prevention Program, Jennie Romer will provide an overview of how the federal government is advancing pollution prevention on a national scale and at community levels through collaboration, partnerships, and grants. Highlights will include opportunities for HCPA members to learn more about EPA programs such as Safer Choice, Environmentally Preferable Purchasing, Pollution Prevention Grants, Green Chemistry Challenge Awards, and more.

Jennie Romer, Deputy Assistant Administrator for Pollution Prevention, EPA's Office of Chemical Safety and Pollution Prevention (OCSPP)

New Approach Methods (NAMs) are becoming more common and have been used recently to replicate, enhance, or replace animal-based testing data. Unfortunately, government agencies don't always accept NAMs in place of animal-based testing. This session will address the use of NAMs and discuss plans to increase their regulatory acceptance.

Kristie Sullivan, Vice President Education and Outreach, Institute for In Vitro Sciences (IIVS)

10:00 am – 11:30 am | Salon CD

Aerosol Products Division Meeting

Scientific Committee Meeting

10:00 am – 12:00 pm | Salon F

State and Federal Government Relations & Public Policy | PFAS

As the landscape for PFAS is changing, Jennie Romer will highlight EPA's PFAS Roadmap and Pollution Prevention Program efforts to expand on federal government actions to reduce PFAS in products, as well as procurement.

Jennie Romer, Deputy Assistant Administrator for Pollution Prevention, EPA's Office of Chemical Safety and Pollution Prevention (OCSPP)

Crafting HCPA's 2024 state and federal Government Relations engagement strategy, Julie will guide a conversation focused on PFAS, including evolving policies, European actions, and litigation matters. Member company representatives will spotlight priority actions through which HCPA will work with Congress, state legislators, and regulators to enable compliance over the next year.

Julie Michalski, Associate, Steptoe

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5

10:30 am – 12:00 pm | Salon AB

Air Care Products Division Program

Creating fragrances and fragranced products is both highly scientific and extraordinarily artistic. To ensure product safety, the Research Institute for Fragrance Materials (RIFM) evaluates all fragrance ingredients for their respiratory toxicity potential as part of a robust safety assessment program and is currently exploring the role of New Approach Methodologies (NAMs) in identifying respiratory toxicity endpoints. But using these ingredients to develop a fragrance is akin to art, with a perfumer as the artist. Like an artist, perfumers draw inspiration from among other things – color. This session will first discuss RIFM's work on developing new animal-alternative ways to evaluate respiratory toxicity for fragrance ingredients that simulate conditions in the human body, as well as explore the unique relationship between color and fragrance, the ways in which color shapes olfactory expectations, and how perfumers use color to create fragrances that emotionally resonate with consumers.

Nikaeta Sadekar, Senior Scientist, RIFM

Mike White, Fragrance Development Director, Scent & Care Division, Symrise North America

4:15 pm - 5:15 pm | Salon CD

Sustainability & Product Stewardship Council

Credibility/Certifications & Claims Task Force Meeting

EPA's Safer Choice and Design for the Environment (DfE) programs help consumers and commercial buyers find cleaning and disinfectant products that perform and meet stringent EPA criteria for effects on human health and the environment. The EPA is currently drafting an update to the Safer Choice Standard, which was last revised in 2015. Given the increasing consumer interest in chemicals used in products, the Agency is also considering expanding its certification programs to include additional product categories and a certification for cleaning service providers. This session will discuss EPA's latest thinking on potential Standard updates and certification program expansions, as well as future program priorities such as outreach.

Clive Davies, Chief, Safer Choice Program Branch, Office of Pollution Prevention & Toxics, EPA

4:15 pm - 5:15 pm | Salon E

Sustainability & Product Stewardship Council Meeting

California, Colorado, Maine, and Oregon have all enacted Extended Producer Responsibility (EPR) laws for packaging that aim to promote increased recycling and a more circular economy. Companies that produce products with obligations under EPR laws will need to have a deep understanding of their packaging data and have a process and system in place for making decisions about their packaging portfolio and reporting to Producer Responsibility Organizations (PROs). This session will discuss how companies can prepare for EPR compliance readiness and strategic insights on EPR policy development.

Michael Washburn, Principal and Owner, Washburn Consulting
